Of course the Black Republicans will see that the brother of the organ here is open to conviction. by is sure of "a quarter."

When our editor visits the city, his first call is at the offices of the dailies of his party, where he bores the althoughter. They had three herrors on hand: foreigners, the Pope, and slavery. They gathered themselves together, swere their oaths, and learned the signs, winks and blinks, and off they started with the yell on these horrors. In process of time herror No. 8 grew up into such huge proportions that it overshadowed the others. They do not sworn the oaths, and had not learned the signs, and grips. They remained outside to decoy the foreign vote into the support of the alliance. In the course of time some of the shrickers began to sneer at the horrors of Nos. 1 and 2, and denounce the brethren who didn't shrick over bleeding Kaness, and poor, much abused Sumner. bleeding Kansas, and poor, much abused Sumner.

They took some foreigners in hand, taught them to shrick in approved style. This did very well as long as definite action was not required. But the brothren have got together in their State Legislatures, and the three horrors come in for their share of attention. Now what is to be done? The Buckeye Legislature is sorely push. done? The Buckeye Legislature is sorely pus-sled just now. A proposition is made to forbid Christian names. He knows the Vice President see in his society, he addresses them by their the State courts from naturalizing foreigners; just as some States have forbidden State office, having anything to do with the execution of the fugitive slave law. They propose, moreover, that a foreigner shall not vote until he has resided in the State six months after naturalization.

There is Sam; he has a horror of slavery too; studders and shrieks at slavery some, but the other horrors must have due attention, and he is determined, whilst he is willing to chake in his boots at slavery, his allies shall utter a small shriek at least at the foreigner, if not at the Pope. On the other hand, what on earth is to be done with the foreign vote, that has helped to put them all in power? There is the dimulty. Those who are in fits about the slavery power, begin to despite everything clas; or at least they insist on disposing of the big hurror first. They urge that they must take one at a time; and the big-

The editor thinks it wrong, exceedingly wrong, in his opinion. He is not positive about it. seven wonders of the world will they get along?

Foreigners are pretty smart and not a little suspicions; and what is left of Sam is very resolute;

Six: After an attentive examination into the facts and circumstances attending the colision of the steamers Henry Lewis and E. D. Howard, and by which collision the former boat was sunk, we morning of that day, the Henry Lewis, well la-den, bound from Cincinnati to New Orleans at about 130 miles below Louisville, met the E. D Howard but lightly laden, bound from New Or leans to Louisville, and at the point of meeting came in contact, which resulted in the sinking of the Lowis, and a loss of ten lives by drowning. The Ohio river, at the point this collision took place, bething near half a mile wide, and makes a send some four or five miles above where thing near a mile distant, if suitable lookoute are kept on board. The stage of the river was also such that either of the boats could have run either above or below the point of contact, with perfect safety.

The testimony furnished by Patterson is, that and near the middle of the river, when the Roward was first seen; that when so seen, the Howard was running up the Indiana shore Ogo witness publicans may allege that they prefer vacant scats the horrors at once; but then they will explode James Patterson, stress that, when within two or three hundred yards of the Lewis, she was pointed out towards the side of the Lewis, and while so The factions in the late canvass were very the Howard, sounded her whistle once, and at the much cheated, and they are very angry about it. | moment of time the whistle of the Howard sound-The Democrats North, all the while, were anxious ed, the engines of the Lewis were stopped and set back. Another witness (Lynch) states the whisthat Kansas should come into the Union as a free tie of the Howard did not sound, nor was an an tors. Two years ago the Democracy were besten State, and the Democrats South that she should swer made until the boats were within 100 or 150 in Indiana, contrary to uniform practice in that come in as a slave State. What a trick and yards of each other. This statement is also or subjected by Alexander C. Pattering the collection of the contrary to uniform practice in that State. The party that got the power then were cheat was here! It was shocking, very! Damo-overwhelmingly defeated the next year, and they have been beaten this year. This ought to be deceived nobody. None but fools and scalots ed, and that he did not answer by one sound of the whistle, but by two, because he believed it im possible for the Howard to go to the right, and sent the State. If it does not satisfy them, it will satisfy the rest of mankind. But the organ would read nothing class. The Black Republicans left, which statement is corroborated by all the here suggests that they were beaten by frauds.

This shows the sympathies of the organ—to reto make Kansas a slave State. The Know-Nothwitness (O'Neil) testifies that he knows the dowbenefit of the Black Republican party! It is a Southern sectional party; adding their testimony shore and the collision actually took place within a rejected and disappointed party. They tried they managed to deceive some people who were the ard had crossed from the Indiana to the Kentucky shore and the collision actually took place within 200 yards of the Kentucky shore. Another (Bell, Nashville pilot), who was in the wheel-house of the Howard at the time, and saw the whole transfailed; and now to excuse their defe at and vent their spleen, they pretend they were beaten by be deceived; it is their destiny; and they don't Kentucky shore, and that the collision did occur trands, and a paper here in Kentucky repeats it answer the purpose for which they were made nearest the Kentucky shore, or two-thirds across as some excuse for the Abelitionists for not going if somebody doesn't cheat them. They are the from the Indiana shore. That when the Lewis was first seen by him and Wood, and ascertained people to make Know-Nothings of; for they to be a steamer, they were about 400 yards apart, and, at the same moment of time she was seen, his whistle sounded once, as showing her intention of keeping to the right or Kentucky shore; that she was not answered promptly by the Lewis, nor until the boats had approached within 100 or 150 yards of each other, and then by a change of sig nals, when it was too late to change positio That had her answer been promptly given, though changed, and allowed the Howard time to have changed, this answed the Howard time to have straightened up, no collision could have ensued, though he also believes there would have been time for the Lewis to have gone to the right instead of the left, as the signal of the Howard first indicated, unless the Lewis had been steering for the Kentucky shore. What we consider wrong on the part of these pilots, and led to the disastrous result, is this: First, in regard to Patterson, who, as well as his partner, testifies that they saw the light of the loward at least one mile off. The latter clause of Rule 2d, of pilots regulations, is imperative and greads thus: "But in case the pilot of the ascending boat fails to make the signal in proper time, the pilot of the descending boat shall make the signal, and the other shall answer promptly." Strong necessity existed for the observan e of this rule here; the lights of a boat had been seen, and was exceedingly improper to wait until the Howard approached within 100 or 150 yards of the Lewis, and no signals made by either party And again, although the testimony for Patterso goes to show that the Lewis was in the main channel of the river, and near the middle of the river, still there is room to doubt this, and come t an opposite conclusion, not so much because it is denied by the opposite party, as from the circumstances that govern and obtain prominence in the case. One of us having visited the Lewis as she lay sunk on the bar, found her within 60 feet of ary Disease. So wide is the field of its usefulness and the shore. A strong probability, therefore, exist that the witnesses for Patterson are mistaken in section of the country abounds in persons publicly time much closer the Kentucky shore than the even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. Wh-n witnesses thought for; and this opinion is further once tried, its superiority over every other medicine strengthened by the Lowis lying so close to shore as sho did; and her being thus close to shore, and running round a point, may nave prevented Wood seeing her as soon as he should have done. Cer tain it is the Lowis should have done. tain it is, the Lewis should have begun to wear off towards the Indiana shore, for the main channel of the river pretty close to where this collision occurred. The foregoing reasons, and the fact o not stopping the engines of the Lewis, as Rule 2 requires, before the boats were so close together as testified to by the engineer on watch (McFar land), does, in our opinion, affix strong and glar-ing culpability upon Alex. C. Patterson, pilot of

In regard to Wood, pilot of the Howard, we have imposed the same penalty as upon Patterson because we believe it was entirely in his power to have averted the disaster, though it might have operated against some of his preconceived notionright. For at the time he blew his whistle ; 400 yards distance from the Lewis, and two-third-the distance from the Indiana shore, or one third from the Kentucky shere, at which he claims to have been running when his whistle sounded and he have stopped his engines and dropped int shore, as he could easily have done, and sounded his whistle again, and again, as required by Rul-21, when not answered promptly, which he has proven was not the case, no collision could or would, in our opinion, have happened. For fail sional skill; but as a great wrong has been com-mitted by both of them, fatal in its consequences to ten persons, who were thus hurried to an un timely end without a moment's warning, the cir cumstances attending the act should be well and maturely weighed before entrusting them again in a like responsible position.

As to the pilot Patterson, he is but young in the business, and a little more experience wo probably do him no harm; for it is not improbable that, had he had the nerve that a longer acquaint ance with piloting would most likely have given, and answered Wood's signal promptly, instead changing them, and made suitable efforts to have gone to the right, the collision might have been avoided, or at least rendered much less disastrous. The character and standing of Wood as a pilot and as a man has heretofore been good and unex-ceptionable, as far as we know; but it does appear to us, in this instance, he has failed to show that

Importation of Dead Bodies,

THE EXPRESSMENT AND THE CORPAR. - Among the thousand serviceable things done by the ex-press companies is the conveyance of corpses. Prior to the establishment of expresses (we won or, now, how the world ever got along without them!), if a husband or son died upon a journey, or while temporarily residing for health or busi-ness at a distance from his kindred, and it was desided by his friends to have his body brought home, it was usually done at heavy expense, if the distance exceeded one or two hundred miles. It was the custom, if the way lay everland, to to employ an undertaker, who would start out in a covered wagon, establish relays, and travel night and day until the task was done. What is now and the day lated in eight hours by the express would then comply the undertaker at least a week; and his pay, if he traveled at night, was rarely less than ten dollars a day, every expense on route in-

At present, the price for conveying a corpse by express, in charge of a Messenger, a distance of 200 or 250 miles upon a regular route, does not exceed thirty dollars. That we believe to be the price between New York and Beston, for in-

The work, however, is not at all popular with expressmen, and the messengers never meet among which coff as are usually inclosed, without a wish that they were rid of it. Some of them are very notional upon this subject, not from superstition, but from that instinctive fear of the progress of decay which all feel in the presence of a corpse; especially when there is any suspicion that it has been kept too long.

An instance illustrating what we have said ocarred in this city one morning last week. An Express Messenger having among his freight, in the Express Company's car, one of those ominous ly oblong boxes, declared confidentially to the conductor of the train, that the body inside "mnst be very far gone indeed," and "the smell of it made him sick as a horse." In vain he tried to forget it, or salubrify the odor by smeking a magnificent cigar. The smell became more offensive to him every minute during the long night that he was whisting away with it over the rail. that he was whizzing away with it over the rati-track; and before the train arrived in New York, it affected him so much that he vomited.

When the drivers, with the wagons of the New York effice, went to the depot for the express reight, the illness of the unfortunate messenger was obvious, and in answer to inquiries he ex-plained the cause. All eyes fell on the oblong box and every man held his nose. It was decided and every mad held his hose. It was decided, annaimously, that it was to far gone to be taken to the office, and as the railroad meneswore (through their compressed olfactories) that they would not suffer it to remain in the depot, the strongest-nerved and most accommodating driver present took it to the "dead-house," up-town. No one knew who the obnoxious box came from. It was usual to make a special bargain in such ases, but no allusion was made to it on the way In the course of the day, however, the mys tery was solved. A gentleman came into the express office, in Broadway, and called for the box "It has been taken to the dead-house," was the "The dead-house!" exclaimed the applicant.

"Yes, sir," rejoined the clerk firmly, "we couldn't stand it, sir. Too far gone, sir."

"Too far gone?" was the angry retort. "I should think so, if you have sont it up to —th street. Explain yourself? what do you mean?"

"I mean that the body smelt too bad, sir!" iterated the clerk. sted the clerk.
"Smelt bad!" cried the visitor; "I have handled for ten years past, and I never smelt anything ut the varnish, and that not unpleasantly. Hang t, sir, that box contains my Manikin, an artificial Wieting, the lecturer upon physiology."

This ridiculous ecclaracisement produced an explosion of laughter throughout the office, and is s still the best joke of the season. It is a capital illustration of the power of the imagination.

And That Was I. BY PROFESSOR HAILMAN.

On a high mountain's peak I dreams of late That walking in the morn, I saw a maid So mild, so sweet—it must be you, thought I. Before her, on his kness, a youth I spied, Whom gently to her throbbing heart she tied,

And that was I.

But soon the scene had changed; in a dark wave The lovely maiden struggled with her grave; Her feeble strength each moment seemed to 17, Leaped in, and drew her from the watery waste-And that was I.

Thus in various ways I dreamt the dream, And every where love would triumphant beam; All seemed round you, and you round all to My. You before in unrestricted freedom flew, The youth in silence followed, faithful, tras-

And when at last I from my dream swoke, The new day brought new longing as it broke; Your dear and lovely form was always by; I saw you warming by his glowing kiss, saw you in his arms enjoy the bliss, And he was I.

At last, on weary life's still wearier path You met me friendly, with angelic grace, And deep hot longing made me fret and sigh. Did you not see the youth's elated look When his fond heart in blissful rapture shook? That y uth was I.

You raised me to a higher sphere of life; In you unit-s the whole strength of my strife, And all my fondest wishes in you lie. If ever man your heart should bear away, Might I but then in triumph boast and say, Yes, that was I. Louisvicke, Jan. 8, 1857.

characteristics of DALLEY'S MAGICAL PAIN EXTRACTOR consist:
1st. Of its never-fashing and unique property, as soon as applied to any external injury, to exact metamination instantly, and rapidly to reduce it. This feature constitutes its great power to a leviate the pain of burns and acadas, and of other paintal diseases. In so incredibly short a space of time, and as will appear from the few testimonials hereunte annexed. Every intelligent mind is fully aware that, in all eases of external injury, the pain is produced by inflammation of the injured parts; and, therefore, if you remove the caute, the effect must conse.

3d. Its purificative properties neutralise the poince that may lurk in the system, and will, when applied to the sover, draw rapidly all impore matter to the surface and elect it; hence the great discharge it produces from soves occasioned by burns, and when applied to old and inveteratesores, saitheam, or other cutaneous diseases.

"At Cost," OUT.," and similar clap-trap words, meet our eye at store entrances and windows, in show cases, and in circulars and newspapers everywhere, and on it occasions. There being not a particle of mercantile philosophy in selling without prout, the observer may naturally saw that these phrases mean. Are mercantis becoming so exceedingly charitable ann humane as to vie with each other in supplying the wants of the community gratuitously? In explanation, three reaches, wast to get rid of old stock, or else their receipts are so light as to make it imperative to raise that my say means. A fourth reason has been given, but has little foundation in lact, viz: Gentiemen may have made profit chough. This is possible, but not very probable—not even in the Selling "at cost," however, does not absolutely mean cheap, since n.uch depends upon the price paid by the merchan.—on ping, perhaps, on long credit. He may also have pind a profit to the European or Eastern manufacturer and importer, costs of transport, interest, exchange, Ec. Now
